Article title: The EU is now striving for an “impossibly large market”, which would also be an opportunity for Finland

Sub-heading: India |It is hoped that a possible trade agreement will reduce the EU's dependence on, among other things, China.

Link: https://www.hs.fi/talous/art-2000011193804.html

Description: Article in Helsingin Sanomat highlighting the advantages of a free trade agreement between India and the EU. Heli Silkaluoma, expert at the Confederation of Finnish Industries shared her perspective on how it would be good for Finnish Companies.

Relevant content:

Reaching an agreement would also be important from the perspective of Finnish companies, according to Heli Siikaluoma, an expert at the Confederation of Finnish Industries (EK) .

"India is an incredibly large export market whose potential has not been fully exploited. There are around 1.4 billion consumers there and fairly strong economic growth," Siikaluoma tells STT.

“We export a lot of machinery and equipment, so this would also be beneficial for Finland,” says Siikaluoma.

A trade agreement would also increase predictability from the perspective of companies.

"However, a lot depends on what the agreement ultimately turns out to be," Siikaluoma estimates.
